

Carolina and Virginia Ready For To-Day's Battle

ADVANCE GUARD HERE FOR BIGGEST EVENT OF FOOTBALL YEAR

University of Virginia and University of North Carolina populated as student bodies gather to witness annual Thanksgiving Day struggle—Whole City Caught in Excitement of Fry—Game Begins at 2:30 o'clock.

Statements of Coaches and Captains

Coach Elliott, of Virginia—We will miss Gooch this afternoon, but at that I feel that Virginia should make a most creditable showing. We are not overconfident. We have been against Carolina teams on previous occasions, and realize that overconfidence may mean disaster. We hope to win.

Captain Wood, of Virginia—I have nothing to say. Virginia's team has made good this year, even if we have lost some games. We made good against Georgetown and we made good against Vanderbilt. I believe we will make good today.

Coach Cartmell, of Carolina—Never have I seen or heard of a Carolina team which was more eager or ready to fight for a game than that which will meet Virginia this afternoon. We are making no predictions. We simply made up our minds to go on the field and fight for every ounce of fight there is in us. The best team is going to win.

Captain Elliott, of Carolina—Just watch old Carolina fight today. Naturally I hope to win and the men feel the same way about it. We realize that Virginia has a strong team and all that, but just watch us fight. That's all.

BY GUS MALBERT.

They're all here—except the fighters. Cocked and primed for the vocal Marathons which will be run at Broad Street Park this afternoon, the while eleven young men who have been worked into the superlative of physical fitness by trained hands endeavor to do 100 yards—the said 100 yards being the exact distance between goal posts—in record time with nothing on their minds but a pigskin, the fellow-who-knows-it-all, meaning of course the sophomore; the fellow-who-knows-nothing, meaning this time the freshman; the fellow-who-hasn't-quite-made-up-his-mind-what-he-knows, in this instance the junior; and last, but by no means least, that Colossus of the Universe, the fellow-who-occupies-the-vantage-ground-beyond-the-clouds, this time the knowledgeable senior—they're all here, and they are neither freshmen, nor sophomores, nor juniors nor seniors—they're just plain nut—er, ah, enthusiasts, who have arrived, even from the wilds of Wilmington, unto the rolling lands of Lynchburg, to do honor to alma mater and to the teams or elevens, which you will, from alma mater.

Turkey Day Too Expensive. It's the festive Thanksgiving Day. Turkey Day would be our expression, but that in these Mammon-ordered times Turkey smacks too much of opulence. And couldst imagine, Genieve, Thanksgiving Day without its football game?

He can't. And another die. In Kalamazoo, it's the home boys against the visitors from Scarsdale; in Kalamazoo, it's the Celery Kids against the Sugar Beet Terrors, of Alma; in—but what's the use. In Richmond, it's the University of Virginia against the University of North Carolina.

And it has been such these many days. What boots it that six long months of dodging the very best girl; six long months of telling Dad the expensive-ness of being among the very best, when conscience twits and confession seems the only paragon—what boots it, say we, when the culmination of denial and abnegation and casual flirting with the truth bring as their reward a trip to Richmond and a ticket to the Carolina football game. Banish care and trouble; exit criminalities and recriminations. It's holiday time, and at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon the very biggest, grandest football game of the season will be played.

Any car going west, and you're there. It's more than a football game—it's an event. Even more than that—it's an institution. Thanksgiving Day minus the gobble would be vastly more entertaining and satisfying than Thanksgiving Day minus a Carolina-Virginia football game.

The teams haven't arrived—yet. As you read this they are receiving their final coddling and darning—pardon the phrase, but it's a football game—before the actual clash. Virginia is at Ashland, and Carolina is—well, Carolina is hiding.

Coaches, friends of the family, friends of coaches and friends of friends of the family, are telling just how it should be done. This afternoon the result of the many and various slices of advice, along with the Thanksgiving turkey, may be digested.
